Elevating Interiors
Through Curated Pieces

With so many decisions involved in styling a home, choosing artwork can feel like a final flourish, or, for some, a daunting blank canvas. Founded on the belief that art should be accessible, personal and seamlessly integrated into your lifestyle, The Art Agency in Cobham offers a bespoke gateway into the world of contemporary art collecting.

By gently challenging the idea that art should simply match your cushions or complement your colour scheme, the Surrey-based gallery is transforming the way homeowners discover and acquire original artworks. Clients are often encouraged to start with art. A single striking piece can inspire an entire room, setting the tone, mood and palette for everything that follows.

PRIME — FEATURES

Founded by Emma Riley and Alison Ramsay, The Art Agency has become a trusted name in the art world, known for its carefully curated portfolio that balances classic and contemporary appeal. Their collection features leading landscape artists like Craig Mooney and Paul Treasure, as well as local artist Nadia Day, known for her semi-abstract depictions of Surrey and beyond.

With clients ranging from quietly brilliant collectors to those still learning the difference between a print and a piece with provenance, The Art Agency proves that buying art doesn't have to be intimidating or impossibly expensive. While based in leafy Surrey, their vision isn't limited by geography. Their mission is simple, to connect people with art they'll love living with.

Looking ahead to 2025, this philosophy aligns beautifully with a key interior trend, a move away from impersonal minimalism and toward spaces full of meaning and character. Think layered textures, personal touches, and statement artworks that spark conversation and connection. Art is no longer a decorative afterthought; it is the heart of the home.

Three landscape artists represented by The Art Agency exemplify this idea.

who now lives and paints in Vermont, spent 25 years in England and draws deeply from that well of memory. His atmospheric scenes feel instantly familiar, people often say they recognise the view, but the remarkable thing is that Craig paints purely from memory. He captures not just a landscape, but the feeling of being there. His work is timeless, emotive, and rich in a sense of place, ideal for anchoring both modern and classic interiors.

Paul Treasure

one of the gallery's most sought-after artists, uses a palette knife to create bold, expressive landscapes alive with movement. Whether it is sunlight dancing on water or a storm rolling in over hills, Paul's work transforms walls into windows to the natural world. "Clients are drawn to his texture and drama." "A large Paul Treasure canvas can shape the entire design direction of a room."

based locally, is known for her joyful, semi-abstract depictions of Surrey and beyond. Her loose brushwork and uplifting palette bring warmth and spontaneity into any space. Nadia also regularly works to commission, painting places that hold meaning for her clients, be it a favourite family walk, a holiday memory, or the view from a beloved home. It is an ideal way to make your interiors truly personal.

While trends may come and go, the right piece of art will always bring personality, joy, and soul into your home. Whether you are drawn to the texture of a Paul Treasure, the lyrical calm of a Craig Mooney, or the energy of a Nadia Day, remember, it is not about matching your curtains. It is about starting with what moves you, and building the rest around it. With private viewings, tailored advice, and a dedication to making art collecting not just accessible but addictive, The Art Agency is quickly becoming the best-kept secret among those with exquisite taste and blank walls. Whether you are a seasoned collector or buying your first piece, The Art Agency brings expertise, passion, and a sharp eye to help you find art that truly resonates, elevating your home from beautiful to unforgettable. If your home is craving something with a little more heart and a lot more style, Alison and Emma would be delighted to assist. www.theartagency.co.uk ➔
